I have had the distinct pleasure of working with Ed Churchman for the last nine months, after contracting with him to design my home in Alder Creek, South Fork, Colorado. During this time, he has continued to demonstrate his extreme talent and attention to detail in all his design work.

From the beginning, Ed was consistent in exercising his skills at adapting vague design ideas that I would present to him. I was most impressed with the speed with which he completed the design work on my house. When I presented him with very sketchy concepts and rough drawings, he swiftly and adeptly brought those to ideas to fruition. His ability to create beautiful, efficient and unique living spaces has resulted in a house design that will be a showcase of his creativity. His design has been admired by everyone who has visited the construction site of my new home.

Ed does not limit himself to that which he has been asked to do. His input and attention to details of the home, including the kitchen design, aesthetic appeal and functionality, have made the construction experience pleasant and fun. His willingness to allow the home to evolve and dictate changes as it was being built, further illustrate his professionalism and his prowess as an artist.

Ed has been an integral part of the construction process, lending his expertise and input to the contractor. He consistently oversees the project, paying close attention to detail of the design and engineering needs that arise. He stays in regular contact with me, advising me of the building process and welcoming open discussion of new ideas.

I strongly recommend Ed for any design work and know that his professionalism, integrity and artistic imagination will continue to allow him to create beautiful living spaces for many generations to enjoy.
